Human history is little more than the record of the appearance of fallacies, their general adoption, tortuous course, and final extinction. They mark a period in the course of events fruitful as a matter of speculation to philosophers. The corn laws of England, as an embodiment of the protective theory, have existed for 150 years, coeval with the paper system. They are now, in principle, among the things that were, and will soon be obliterated from the statute books. For 150 years the English Government has been in pursuit of a phantom, which has involved the people in misery beyond all conception. Up to the year 1633, England was a corn-exporting country. Its surplus of agricultural produce more than sufficed year, under Charles II., the first law to favor corndown wisdom as follows:

"The surest and most effectual means of promoting and the application of labor and capital to land, the export duty John Livingston by a Whig Legislature for overwas reduced to 5s. 4d., and it was further enacted that it charges as public printers—the whole expenses of shall be lawful for all and every person to buy in open market prosecuting said suit, after Mr. Livingston's failure the whalf of the ne gr of sec 9 in same t and r, each conand to keep in his granaries, and to sell such corn again, not within three months from the purchase."

This degree of protection was continued, and gradually export duties were abolished altogether, and import duties imposed and increased, until the import was prohibited, unless famine prices, up to the year 1842. The population, price of corn, and th moort and export were as follows:

191	Population.	Price wht.	Wheat.	import.
1700	5,475,000	40.00	188,332
1750	6,467,000	27.11	946,603
1800	9,168,000	63.02	22,315	1,264,509

As the population of England progressed, the public commissioners offer him five thousand. mind was continually alarmed lest they should become dependent upon foreign countries for bread. The science of farming was encouraged until it reached a high state of perfection, and the continually swelling population steadily enhanced the demand for To the Editors of the Indiana State Sentinel bread, causing the price to rise to an extraordinary | Sirs:-In pursuance of law, I furnish for publication, a level, where it was maintained by action of law, in list of the official returns of the late election for Represent- $626 09. order to draw out all the capacity of the country to atives in Congress. produce food. Barren heaths, marshes, clay lands, I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant, all that under ordinary circumstances are unfitted for cultivation, were forced into the service, and made to produce bread at some price, and the people were compelled to give any price that would preserve the country from dependence on foreign nations for bread The manufacturing population rolled up, however, and still the demand for bread continued to exceed the supply, until it became evident that so much of the means of the people was expended for bread, that even taxes could not be paid in full, and on the 10th June, 1845, the minister declared as follows

"I do not defend the present corn-law, on the ground that it is for the special advantage of any particular interest. I believe that it would be impossible to maintain any law which should be supposed to be founded upon the consideration upon which it is said this law is founded, viz., a desire to increase the rents of the landlords, (hear.) As to the incumbrance of estates, it is impossible to rest its defence on any such ground. It is impossible to rest its defence on the exclusive interest of any class. . I will freely own that I doubt whether or no one could vindicate the maintenance of this protection on the ground of being independent of foreign states. I should rejoice in the fact, and in the result, that a great portion of our supply was derived from our internal resources. But to hope to make ourselves entirely independent of foreign supply is out of the question."

This is the result of 150 years of strife and oppression. From an agricultural or bread-selling people they have been converted into bread-buying people, in spite of all the laws which could be enacted. The manufacturing population have been taxed, according to the best estimates, £50,000,000; or $250,000,000 per annum in the extra price they have paid to raise bread in England. In spite of all that incumbrance the natural advantages of England enable her manufacturers to triumph over all the world, while that world pursued war rather than peace. The competition has now become so great, that the burden of the corn-laws must be removed, and they have been Shelby, look back to the 150 years of corn-law bondage in Bartholomew, abandoned in principle. Hereafter the world will Johnson, the history of England, as they now do to the 400 Brown, years of submission to the Romans, and the prevalence of "protection" will be regarded much like t Salem witchcraft-men will wonder that such thir were .- New York Morning News.

Pet Banks--Government Treasury

The Charleston Mercury's Washington correspon ent alludes to these interesting matters:

"The matter of pet banks and deposites is one th requires an immense deal of watching, and brin forth an immense quantity of manœuvreing from the who are desirous to have the handling of those p lic moneys-the deposites. It is so pleasant to ha dle the money of the dear people, to have a mill · or two or three to loan out to your friends or custo ers on their notes, and charge them a pretty high ra of interest, while you don't pay any interest yourse Besides, if you get hold of a pretty large sum, it m be profitable to 'bust'-you may be able to make a ve good thing of it by obtaining 2 or 3 millions of dep sits, and then making tracks for Texas, no not for Te as, that's no longer the El Dorado of Swartwouters, for some other land of promise-or by having an exp sion, and then taking the benefit of the Bankrupt law, if (there be one; after which, you come out white-washed, ready to set up your carriage, build houses, and become a millionaire all at once. But seriously, the placing of these deposites in safe keeping by the Secretary of the Treasury is one of his most arduous duties, and one that when discharged in the most faithful and upright manner must still be a matter of deep anxiety and concern to him, so intimately is safe-keeping and disbursement of the public funds connected with the public welfare and the success of the administration. There have been announcements upon announcements that Mr. Walker was making the best arrangements in his power to secure the depositories, the placing in his hands of an equal amount of State Stocks, &c. That Mr. Walker will do his utmost under the present state of the law, I do not doubt, while I believe that the next Congress will reestablish the Independent Treasury, so as that the present troublesome and in the best of times unsafe method will be superceded."

Yours respectfully, The following letter from Doctor Ritchey, of Franklin, Ind.,

Franklin, Ind., April 14, 1845. Messrs, Sanford & Park-I have but a few bottles of Wister's balsam of wild cherry remaining on hand of the last lot furnished me by you. I heretofore waited until I had sold out and had obtained the money for one lot before I ordered another. But such is the demand for the article that I do not wish to be without it, and am therefore led to anticipate a little. The money for the last lot shall be forthcoming by the time the lot is disposed of, which, from the sales I have made lately, I think will be but a short time, The etfects of the balsam are in many cases strikingly beneficial. 27/1 improves upon acquaintance more than any other Patent Medicine I have ever known. A Almost all others fail upon trial, and not being able to hear the test of experience, soon sink into disuse. on the end of her tail, supposed to be about four years old; This, however, seems to be most highly valued by those who have Levi Townsend vs. Abigal Melton, Mary Smith, Jesse Hughes and appraised by Alba Jenners and Edward B. Reed at $30, bc. tested its virtues, and experienced its healing efficacy in their own cases. Yours very respectfully, JAMES RITCHEY.
